DURHAM, N.H. — The University of New Hampshire will host two lectures on beer’s significant social, cultural, economic and environmental contributions to the U.S. during N.H. Craft Beer Week April 6-15, 2018.

Theresa McCulla, brewing historian for the American Beer History Initiative at the Smithsonian Institution, will talk about the unique history and legacy of Prohibition with respect to beer using objects from the collection of the National Museum of American History, Friday, April 6, 2018, at 5 p.m. Her talk will end with a discussion of the museum’s new brewing history archive. Registration (<https://unhconnect.unh.edu/s/1518/index-1col-social.aspx?sid=1518&gid=4&pgid=3281&cid=5491&ecid=5491&crd=0&calpgid=663&calcid=1552>) for this free event, funded by a grant from the William L. Dunfey Endowment, is highly recommended due to limited space.

On Tuesday, April 10, 2018, at 6:30 p.m., Butch Heilshorn, co-founder of Earth Eagle Brewings and author of “Against All Hops,” and Emerson “Tad” Baker, professor at Salem State University and author of “The Devil of Great Island,” will talk about local beer history from both the academic and industry perspective.

“Heilshorn uses locally sourced and foraged ingredients to create unique and historic beers, unlike anything else currently on the beer scene, and Baker has been a contributor to these recipes, using his expertise to develop modern takes on historical ales,” said Cheryl Parker, UNH’s brewery manager.

The April 10 event includes tours of the new UNH Brewing Science Laboratory starting at 5:30 p.m. and beer baked treats inspired by Heilshorn’s brews. There is a $10 fee and registration by April 3 (<https://unhconnect.unh.edu/s/1518/index-1col-social.aspx?sid=1518&gid=4&pgid=3284&cid=5495&ecid=5495&crd=0&calpgid=61&calcid=1956>) is required.

Both lectures are sponsored by the College of Life Sciences and Agriculture, the College of Liberal Arts, and the Department of History.

“Beer is at the heart of human history, and brewing is a significant segment of New Hampshire’s economy,” said Cynthia Van Zandt, associate professor of history. “We’re delighted to host historians and brewers who are at the forefront of new directions in research on the history of food and commodities, both at the national level and here in New Hampshire. Beer isn’t just good to drink; it has much to teach us about our past.”

In fall 2017, UNH debuted its brewing minor, answering the call of a growing number of students interested in the craft beer industry. The program compasses all aspects of beer brewing, from agricultural production of raw ingredients to quality control and distribution of the final product, and includes hands-on instruction at UNH’s Brewing Science Laboratory.

The 10-day celebration of New Hampshire's craft brewers is sponsored by the New Hampshire Brewers' Association and Brew New Hampshire and features more than 150 events, including beer tastings, tours and live music at breweries, beer stores and restaurants statewide.

The University of New Hampshire is a flagship research university that inspires innovation and transforms lives in our state, nation and world. More than 16,000 students from all 50 states and 71 countries engage with an award-winning faculty in top ranked programs in business, engineering, law, health and human services, liberal arts and the sciences across more than 200 programs of study. UNH's research portfolio includes partnerships with NASA, NOAA, NSF and NIH, receiving more than $100 million in competitive external funding every year to further explore and define the frontiers of land, sea and space.
