Leadership, Energy of Cookman Twins 'Raises the Bar' for Field Hockey Team

Sisters from London find a home at UNH

Monday, January 8, 2024

Tamera and Tasmin Cookman of London, England have been playing field hockey since they were six years old. They were scouted by a handful of American colleges, but the Cookmans found their home and community at the University of New Hampshire. On and off the field, the sisters find a way to balance college life, academics and their passion for field hockey. They are raising the bar for everyone around them, says Robin Balducci '85, head coach of the field hockey team, with their unique combination of competitiveness, personality and leadership.
