3-13-2007

UNH Welcomes Scholar To Discuss Role Of Christian Women In Ancient Rome

Lori Wright
UNH Media Relations

Follow this and additional works at: https://scholars.unh.edu/news

Recommended Citation
https://scholars.unh.edu/news/671
UNH Welcomes Scholar To Discuss Role Of Christian Women In Ancient Rome

This news article is available at University of New Hampshire Scholars' Repository: https://scholars.unh.edu/news/671
UNH Welcomes Scholar To Discuss Role Of Christian Women In Ancient Rome

Contact:  Lori Wright
603-862-0574
UNH Media Relations

March 13, 2007

“Death and the Maidens: Finding Early Christian Women in Ancient Catacombs,” will be held Monday, March 19, 2007, at 5 p.m. in Memorial Union Building Room 338/40. Her discussion is also sponsored by the UNH Classics Department. The discussion is free and open to the public.

Denzey’s discussion will focus on her sociohistorical research involving cataloging, "reading," and investigating the iconographic images of women in the catacombs of Rome. It will explore the interplay between representation and power, authority and image, and uncovering the lives and social roles of women in the domestic and ecclesiological spheres of early Christian Rome.

A scholar of the religions of late antiquity, and the religious and social history of the Roman and late Roman Empire, Denzey is the author of several articles on aspects of gnosticism and early heterodox forms of Christianity. She has done extensive research in Rome where she worked on Roman religions in their cultural context and researched the culture of death in early Christianity.

She holds a Ph.D. from Princeton and serves in official positions in the American Academy of Religion and the Canadian Corporation for the Study of Religion; she is also one of the recognized savants for teaching technology in religious studies.

For more information about this event, contact David Frankfurter, UNH professor of religious studies and history, at 603-862-3015 and davidtf@hopper.unh.edu.